NEIDERMEINDIG, GERMANY

Dear Editor and Herald Readers: If you will allow me a little space in your good little paper I will let my friends know that I am not dead.

Dear friends, I wish I could write to you all, but I haven't the time. I will try to tell you all a little something about my hike from France. We left Dember Rea, France, Nov. 28, 1918, and landed in Neidermeindig, Germany, Dec. 16. We walked all the way, and we had to carry our packs and guns. I don't know just how far it is, but I think about 175 on 200 miles. But we got through pretty well. After we left France we commenced to see good looking girls. I guess you all have heard about Sunny France. It is not much sunny, for there are so many big hills that the sun cannot get in and the houses are all fifth, old stone houses, covered with wheat straw, but they do not leak when it rains, and it rains there most of the time. The houses here in Germany are stone covered with slate.

I guess you all have heard talk of pretty French girls. They are not much pretty, for they are all snaggie toothed and hump-backed. The German girls have got them beat for beauty, but the good old U. S. A. girls have them all beat, especially the French girls. I long to see my friends in Tennessee again.

BULLET HITS BYSTANDER

One of the bullets from the pistol of Market Master O. M. Russell, sent into the body of a dog reported to him to be mad, glanced from the sidewalk on the south side of the Public Square shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, and struck J. C. Whitehead in the breast. The bullet did not pierce the skin, but made a bad bruise. The shooting created quite a little excitement. Officer Russell stated after the shooting that he had been told by A. M. Brown that the dog had a fit. The officer also received word that the dog was mad and that a policeman had asked him to kill the animal. Three or four shots were fired at close range, one of the bullets which nearly spent hitting Mr. Whitehead. The injury was not serious enough to merit medical attention. Mr. Whitehead, who is a friend of Market Master Russell, stated that he did not blame Officer Russell in the least for the accident.—Banner.

LONEOAK

A few lines dear friends and children. I am still in the land of the living, but am in very feeble health, and not able to get about very much. I write to the Herald so that everybody can read it. Everything is peaceable and quiet, with the sun shining nice and warm. N. J. Judd brought the news that brother William H. Judd of the 8th Dist. did not visit him, so this leaves only three living boys out of ten. Frank Davis and wife, and J. M. Judd of Cookeville visited the writer Sunday evening. N. Judd visited me today. Two Sundays the house has been full of visitors—too many to mention. May the Lord bless the editor and the many readers. REV. M. JUDD.

PLEASANT HILL ACADEMY

Mrs. Albertson and Mr. Redmond spoke at the Academy Friday evening, March 27, in the interest of the farm and garden clubs of the county for the boys and girls, and for the adults. Their talks were illustrated with excellent slides shown with the fine lantern recently gotten for their work. The pictures demonstrated what the clubs in Cumberland county are doing.

Mrs. Albertson also spoke of the exchange for woman's work now up in Crossville in connection with the club, that the producer may find a market, and the purchaser the food or fancy work sought. Through the courtesy of Mr. Bishop of the Crossville Chronicle an advertisement of such goods may be inserted twice for ten cents.

The Academy baseball team played Crossville High in Crossville Saturday, a large number of pupils and several teachers going with them.

Miss Lainhart of the Crossville High School gave an inspiring talk at the Academy Friday evening, March 14 on Manual Training and Home Decoration. Beginning with the story of a friend's home, beautiful because of its simplicity, she went on to speak of the beauty of handmade furniture and of the value of such hand work to boys and girls, the training in exactness, in learning to drive a nail straight or make a fence that will last for years. Attention to all the details of the work guarantees that quality of permanence which should be one of the chief characteristics of the thing handmade. She spoke of the influence of Ruskin and the craft work he started, the classes in joinery, wood-carving, and metal work, which opened the eyes of the public to an appreciation of beautiful things and the advantage to hand and brain of the effort to make such things, of self-expression thru the trained hand and its use of tools. Even little children should be taught to work with the hands in an effort to make useful, beautiful things. Nowadays our hospitals for wounded soldiers are using craft work for convalescing men, finding that it stimulates them to interest and effort, even leading some to higher lines of business than they have before followed.

In closing, Miss Lainhart dwelt on the moral value of manual training, how the Ruskin Shops in the Lake country in England made interested and intelligent craftsmen out of those who would otherwise have wasted themselves in shiftless living and likely ended in the poorhouse and she reminded us that the best way to keep out of mischief was to be thinking of good and beautiful things.

The first of the two games played Saturday at Crossville with the High school nine, the Academy won with the score 21 to 0, but in compassion passed up the second to the home team; by the way nearly a fresh team, score 7 to 5.

Forty-four people from Pleasant Hill and a good number from Crossville attended the games.

The visitors from Pleasant Hill were royally entertained at lunch in the High School, and with sandwiches before leaving, and wish to express their hearty appreciation of all the kindness shown them while in Crossville.

The Christian Endeavour meeting Sunday evening was led by Dr. Wharton who gave a stirring account of the inspiring life of Mary Slessor, missionary to Calabar, Africa. The singing was led by a quartet of girls.

We handle nothing but the genuine AMERICAN field and garden fence, and believe it is the BEST made. It is made of better wire and is better galvanized and sells at about the same price of other fence. Why not buy the best??
